InfoCision President and CEO Carl Albright honored as Honorary Alumnus by The University of Akron

Akron, Ohio, January 15, 2010 – On Wednesday, January 13 at The University of Akron, University President Luis Proenza presided over a ceremony honoring InfoCision President and CEO Carl Albright for his many contributions to the University and the Greater Akron community. To thank him for his efforts, Proenza named Albright an Honorary University of Akron Alumnus. Albright graduated from The Ohio State University in 1989.

In his speech, Proenza cited numerous of examples of Albright's business successes and philanthropic generosity; including Albright's role in the conceptualization and building of InfoCision Stadium, his recognition last year as a Visionary Award winner and his work with Helping America's Children, the charity organization founded by Albright and his wife Lori.

"Carl is a highly accomplished chief executive, responsible for the significant growth and success of InfoCision Management Corporation – the second largest, privately held teleservices company in the world," said Proenza. "Through his professional integrity and success, community leadership and involvement, and personal largesse and commitment, Mr. Albright has enriched the lives of countless individuals, improved the world in which we live, and modeled the wisdom and values that The University of Akron seeks to impart to its students."

"I am extremely grateful to The University of Akron for recognizing me as an Honorary Alumnus," said Albright. "I have been fortunate to work for a great company in InfoCision that was founded by a great leader in Gary Taylor, who truly cares about his community and The University of Akron, and has set a wonderful example for me. I look forward to a very positive relationship between InfoCision and our hometown University well into the future."
